

2018 IMPACT REPORT

FR1ENDS of the CH1LDREN

Portland + SW Washington

Dear friend of Friends,

It has been a great honor to serve as the new Executive Director for Friends of the Children-Portland during a time of incredible growth and impact. Thank you for believing in our model and investing in the lifelong success of our youth.

I find myself frequently in awe of the breadth and depth of the Friend role. Friends work on a highly individualized basis with each of their youth and their families to help them successfully set and achieve their goals. They also provide opportunities for enriching experiences, and they advocate for additional resources. During a youth's elementary school years, Friends focus on supporting literacy and math skills. They provide encouragement as youth begin to explore new activities and build positive peer and teacher relationships. When youth get older, Friends help youth develop critical skills that prepare them for navigating life beyond high school. These skills include building a positive network, applying for school and jobs, and finding access to healthcare and housing.

In 2018, we challenged ourselves to serve more youth. We enrolled our largest selection class yet, consisting of 75 kindergartners. We selected 17 new kindergartners from Roosevelt and Washington elementary schools in Clark County, WA, where we also successfully opened the doors to our new programming site by galvanizing support from our amazing local network of donors. It has been incredible to see the pride youth have in our Portland, Rockwood and SW Washington community spaces. Our youth form relationships with each other and the community in ways that truly embody the positive relationship building and sense of belonging we strive to create.

Lastly, our youth had remarkable achievement, with 36 graduating from our program—the largest graduating class yet! We are continuously finding new ways to support our youth during their critical growing years to ensure that when they move on from our program, they have the tools to achieve self-sufficiency and independence. Our Board of Directors and organizational leadership recognized this as a top priority in our 2018–2022 Strategic Plan.

Your support truly helps drive greater equity, justice, and opportunity for the youth who face the greatest challenges in our community. I am inspired by the compassion and resilience that guides Friends of the Children—from staff, to our youth and their families, volunteers and donors, and everyone in between—you make this work possible. Together, we are breaking the cycle of generational poverty one child at a time, and I can't wait to see what we achieve together in 2019.

With deep appreciation,

Pietro Ferrari, Executive Director

WHAT ARE ADVERSE CHILDHOOD EXPERIENCES?

We select youth for our program who are most at-risk of not reaching their full potential due to early adversity. Adverse Childhood Experiences are stressful experiences occurring in a child's life that can have negative, lifelong effects on health and well being. Traumatic events or risk factors include child maltreatment as well as exposure to extreme household challenges.

SUPER STATISTICS!

98.8% of parents and caregivers believe that their child's life has changed for the better since getting a Friend.

Through funding from the Portland Children's Levy, we have enrolled 67 youth into our program directly from foster care since 2015.

"The compassion and care shown by the professional mentors at Friends of the Children to the youth enrolled in the program is remarkable. Youth in foster care face many challenges in their lives, and the consistency they find through the Friends program provides much-needed stability and unconditional support."

— Lisa Hansell, Grant Manager, Portland Children's Levy

Relationships Built on Trust

Trust does not come easily to Gabriela.* It was something that her mentor, Lauren, would have to earn. “Gabriela didn’t talk to me for about a year,” says Lauren. Pushing through the awkward silences, Lauren would continue to meet Gabriela regularly, picking her up from school every week, helping with homework, and meeting her friends. “I often wondered whether or not I was a good fit,” says Lauren, “but then after a year she opened up.” Lauren learned that Gabriela had conditioned herself to not get attached. Reflecting on their first year together, Gabriela had shared with Lauren, “I JUST WANT YOU TO KNOW THAT WHEN I GOT YOU AS A MENTOR I DIDN’T KNOW IF YOU WOULD STAY BECAUSE PEOPLE IN MY LIFE OFTEN LEAVE.” Today, Lauren is Gabriela’s best friend. Lauren says the two talk about everything and anything in a 5th grader’s life—“homework, movies and TV, music, and boys.” Before opening up to Lauren, Gabriela had struggled socially and emotionally because she didn’t feel like anyone would listen; or worse, they would listen and soon abandon her. Since learning to trust Lauren, Gabriela has been able to also form positive relationships with adults whom she trusts. Gabriela knows that her dad, her teacher, and Lauren are there for good. Lauren goes to Gabriela’s school once a week and frequently joins her for visits with her math teacher in which she receives additional instruction. Gabriela is from a Spanish-speaking home and entered kindergarten still learning English. Today, she is reading at grade level and literature is her favorite subject. Gabriela loves the Friends community. During their outings, Lauren gives her the option of choosing where they go, and Gabriela always asks to go to our Rockwood facility. When they arrive, Gabriela is greeted by everyone—youth, Friends, and program managers. “Everyone knows her name,” says Lauren. “She feels a real sense of belonging with Friends, and I think this community has helped her build a level of confidence that will support her for the rest of her life.”

Oliver* is in the 7th grade. Like many youth, he loves sports, especially basketball. “I began noticing how good he was at basketball within our first couple of outings,” says Jay, his Friend. Another thing Oliver has in common with other youth is that, unfortunately, he is no stranger to bullying. Oliver is still learning how to manage his reaction to bullying and sometimes gets into trouble at school. After speaking with Oliver’s mom and teachers, Jay learned that much of the bullying centered on a common theme. Oliver was getting singled out for not being “tough” or “manly.” IT BECAME CLEAR THAT OLIVER DESPERATELY NEEDED A PLACE WHERE HE COULD FEEL ACCEPTED FOR WHO HE WAS. In previous outings, Jay had noticed Oliver and another youth he mentors, Alik, bonding over a game of basketball. “So I began to think that pairing the two together might benefit both of them,” Jay said. Alik had recently moved to Battleground, WA and was having a hard time with the lack of diversity in his school. Spending time with a peer who also identified as Black was very positive for Alik. Reflecting on the year since the two became friends, Jay says, “I have seen tremendous growth in them both as individuals and in their relationship with each other. They have been able to break the stereotype of athletes in that both youth feel comfortable affirming each other and having vulnerable conversations. Both youth have expressed to me that they see the other as a brother—someone who ‘gets it.’” What’s more, Oliver hasn’t had any issues in school since he became friends with Alik. Now he embraces who he is, feeling validated and affirmed by his strong relationships outside of school. By building community with these youth, Jay has created interactions that both felt they were missing. “Though the youth pairing was originally facilitated by me,” says Jay, “the two now have a very real bond that models what peer-support can truly look like.”

Belonging and Basketball

Where We Serve

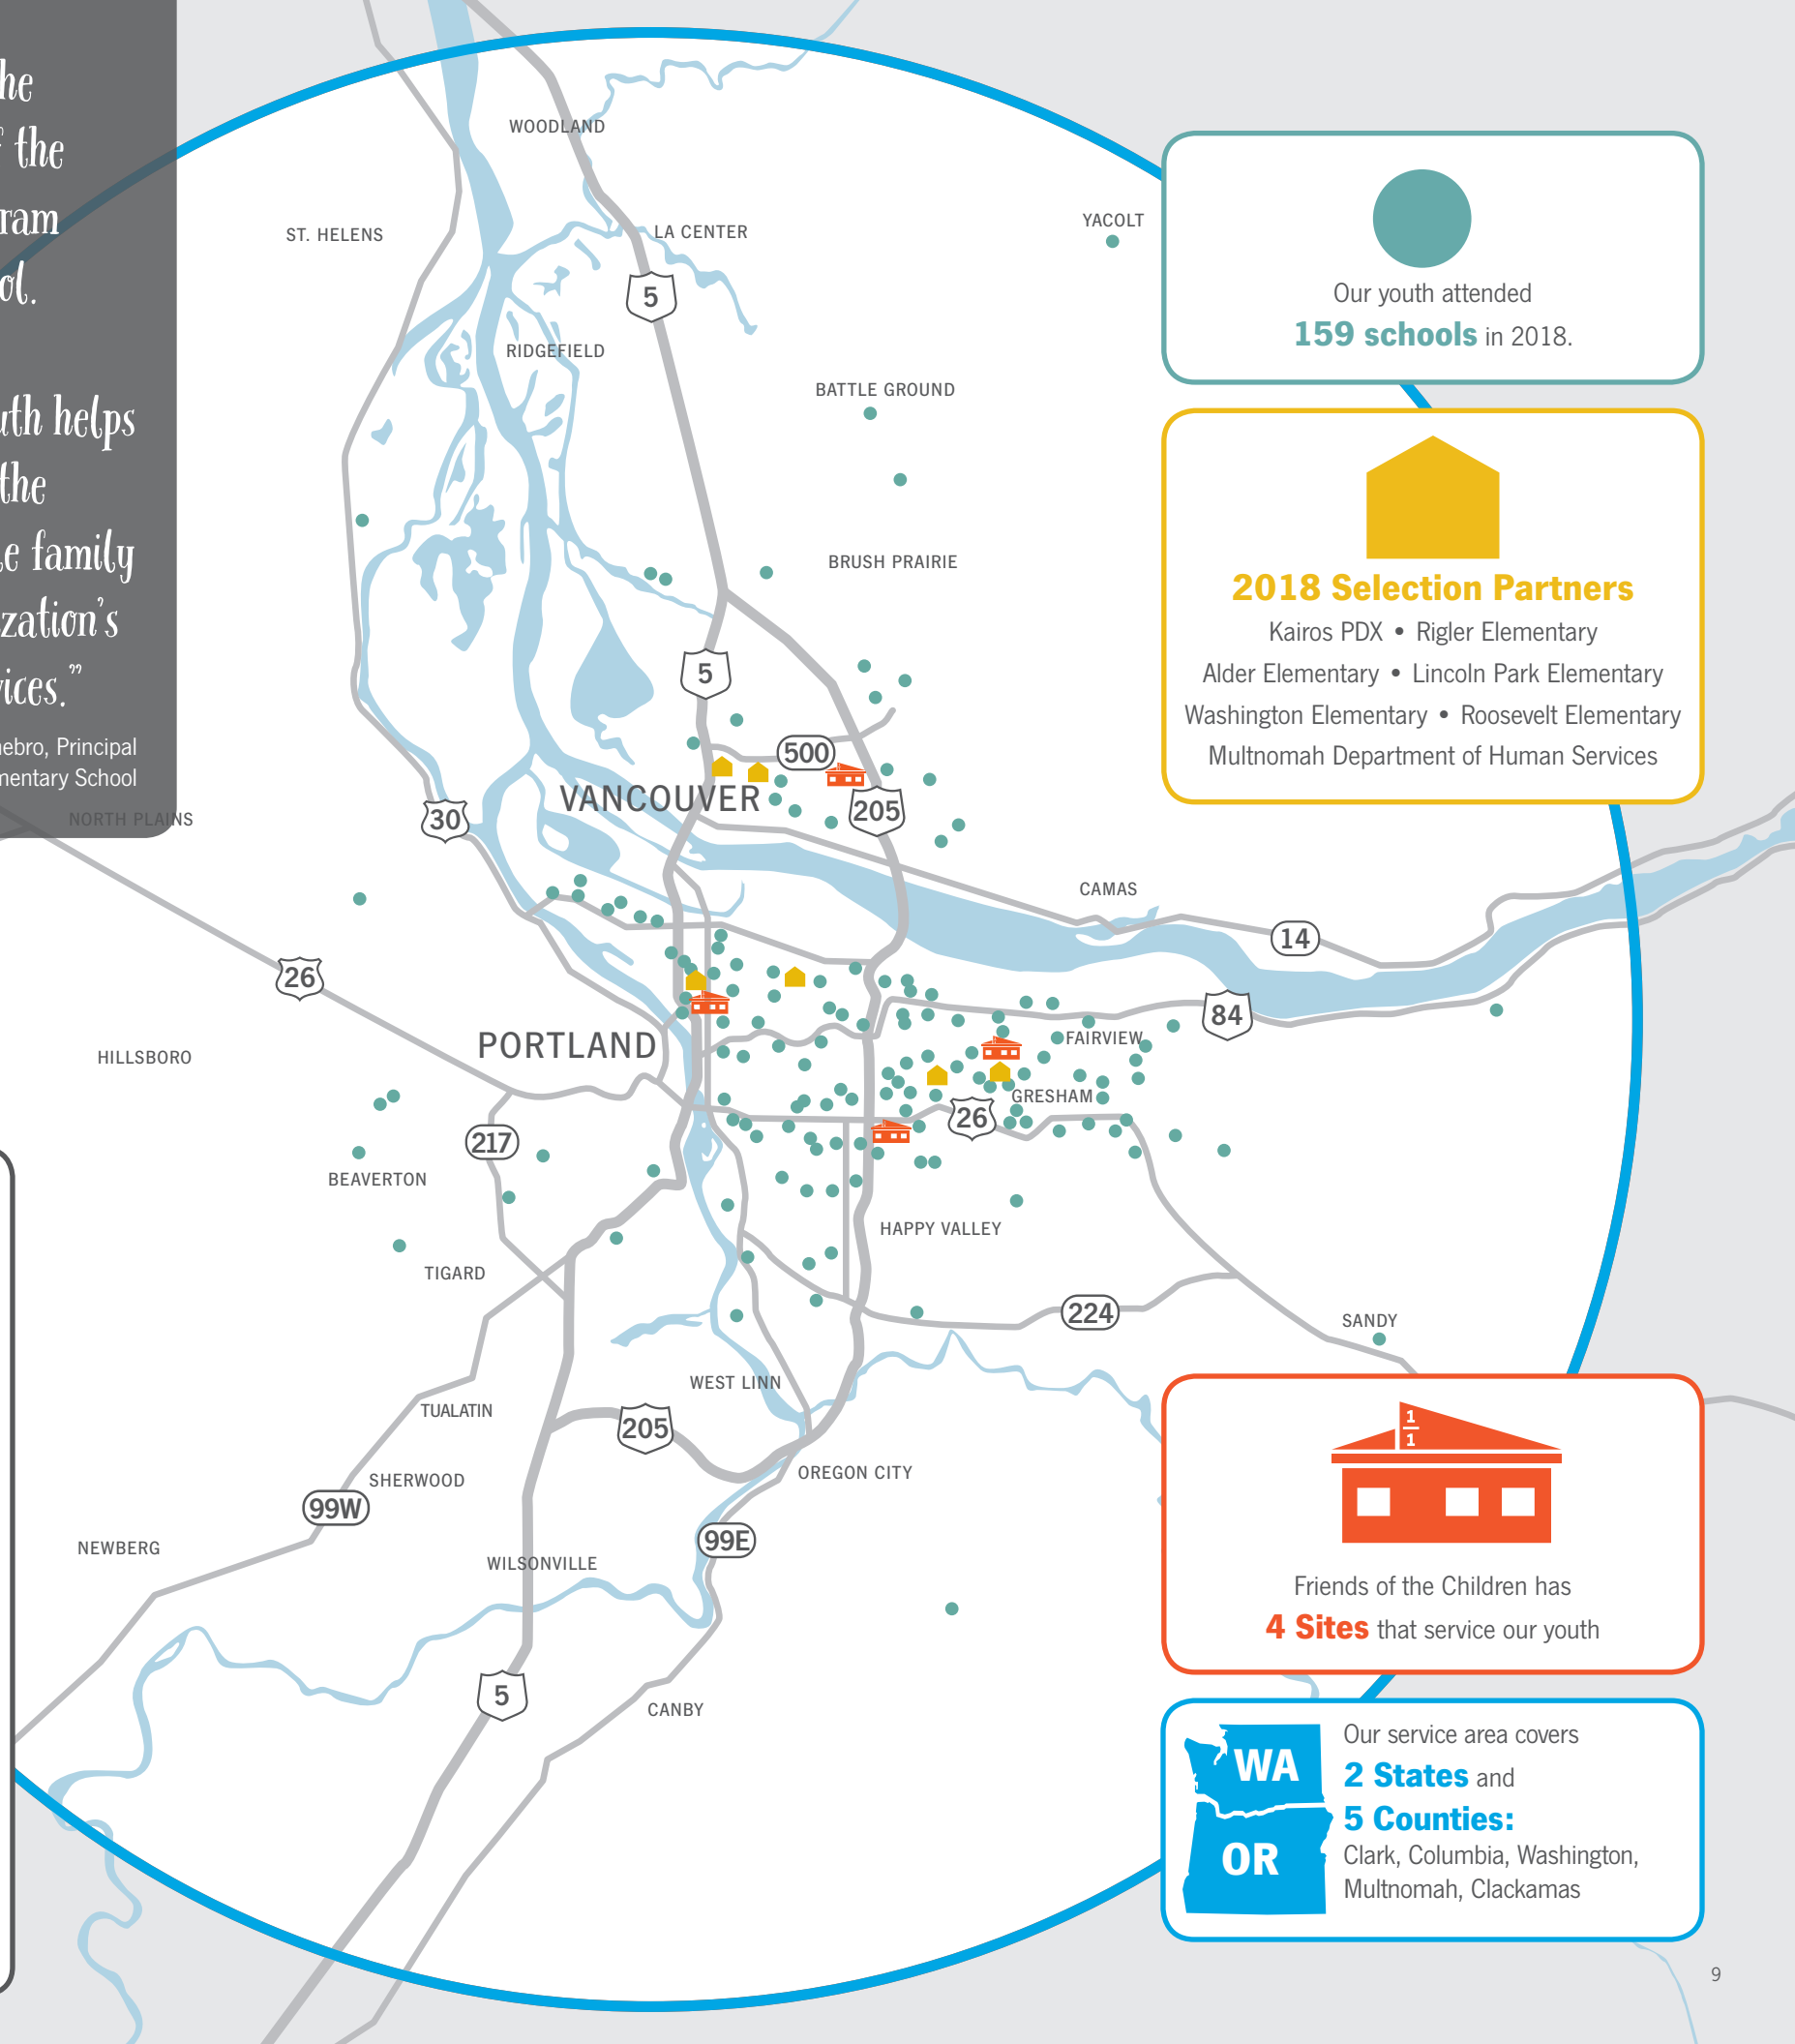

"I have seen firsthand the benefit of the Friends of the Children mentoring program for students at my school. The educational support Friends provide their youth helps our students succeed in the classroom, and the whole family benefits from the organization's holistic approach to services."

— Ceci de Valdenebro, Principal
Lincoln Park Elementary School

OVER THE COURSE OF A WEEK, the average Friend will provide services to 9 youth by:

- ✓ Visiting 7 schools across 4 school districts.
- ✓ Helping 6 of their youth get to extracurricular activities.
- ✓ Bringing 7 of their youth to our Rockwood Facility for youth programs and activities.
- ✓ Driving an average of 135 miles within our 30 mile service radius.

"I strongly believe that if I didn't have Friends of the Children, I would not be the person I am today. I have learned so many things that have helped me get to where I am now. It's definitely a life changing experience, and I'm forever grateful that they picked me!"

– Irisa, 20 years old, program graduate
